Measure M Fails - What Now

By Elizabeth Cowley

Measure M, which would have re-affirmed the Board of Supervisors zoning changes on portions of the 20,000 acre Rancho San Carlos property, was defeated on November 5 with a no vote of just over 55%. The Rancho San Carlos / Santa Lucia Preserve project which included 350 homes, a 150 room hotel, a golf course, general store and 18,000 acres of open space on 20,000 acres can not go forward as planned. There are currently 125 legal lots of record but the store and other support facilities can not be built without the zoning changes.

At the No on M reception held on election evening volunteers were giddy as the returns came in showing M's defeat. Noel Mapstead, the original plaintiff on the Rancho San Carlos referendum which brought Measure M to the ballot, said the vote indicated that "Individually and collectively (the voters) furthered their sense of value in preserving their quality of life in Monterey County."

Tom Gray, Managing Partner for Rancho San Carlos said at the Yes on M reception that the project "may not be perfect, but its better than anything else." When asked what could have been done differently, Gray said "Our mistake was in thinking our first amendment rights are the same (as opponents)" adding that opponents to the project were able to say whatever they wanted without an objective "arbiter of the truth." As the yes on M

Monterey Regional Park District Update

Submitted by District

At their monthly meeting, the Board of Directors took the following actions:

* Authorized a grant request to Cal Trans and the Coastal Conservancy for funding to construct a Carmel River pedestrian/bicyclist bridge that will allow the Monterey Bay Coastal Trail to connect Carmel with Point Lobos State Reserve.

* Approved a $53,000 four year option agreement from Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hall for a vacant dune lot at Del Monte Beach subdivision. Acquisition of remaining vacant lots in this subdivision is a joint project with the City of Monterey. The City and the District hope to acquire many vacant lots from willing sellers to establish a public access coastal dune park.

* Authorized the $12,000 purchase of a vacant dune lot from Lowell and Janie Figen in Sand City. The District has been purchasing vacant lots in Sand City for five years in an effort to establish a contiguous, undeveloped and publicly accessible Monterey Bay State Seashore that will connect Monterey State Beach with Fort Ord State Beach.

Reservations are being taken. To make an appointment, call The SPCA at 373-2631, ext. 223.

Rippling River Craft Room Bazaar

The Fourteenth Annual Rippling River Craft Room Bazaar will be held Saturday, December 7, 1996 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The craft room is located in Building 3 at Rippling River, 53 East Carmel Valley Road, just east of Carmel Valley Village.

Once a year the people who attend classes in the Craft Room hold a sale of handmade art and craft items, home baked confections and white elephant treasures.

The Craft Room activities are funded by the people who attend these classes. They donate their talents to make items to be sold at the bazaar. The proceeds of the sales are used to replenish the supplies of raw materials that are used in the classes during the year. This allows these hand crafted items to be priced very reasonably.

Carmel Adult School sponsors the classes in arts and crafts held at Rippling River.

Items for sale include a specialty of the classes, ceramics, with angels being featured this year. They are hand glazed with various themes, just in time for Christmas.

Vases, boxes, jars and urns, chess sets, centerpieces, decor items, kid stuff and Christmas ornaments are only a few categories of ceramic items that will be available. Anything can be ordered.

There will be several tables filled with ceramic items but other handmade craft items will also be available for sale.

camp watched the vote go against them, Gray thanked the Yes on M volunteers for their efforts and said, "We'll win ... eventually."

Measure M is defeated but what will now happen to the 20,000 acre Rancho San Carlos property is still undecided.

Judith Brown, Rancho San Carlos Campaign Manager, said "We came in with the absolutely best plan." Brown said they have ruled out coming back with another plan as it would be too time consuming and the investors are eager to get a return on their investment. Brown said they are currently trying to devise a plan to maximize their return on the existing lots of record but that they will "try to save some portion of the preserve." As the Rancho San Carlos investors are eager to move things along, Brown estimates that a decision will be made in the next few weeks.

FUN IN THE SUN

Dave Lyon

Everyone's favorite Frequent Flyer is back by popular demand. The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center is very pleased and proud to announce that the 38th annual Santa's Fly-In will be held on Saturday, December 14, 1996, at 11 a.m. at the Carmel Valley Vintage Airfield.

Just as they have for the past 37 years, Santa and Mrs. Claus will arrive at the airfield via private airplane, direct from the North Pole, where they will be greeted by the usual collection of kids, fire trucks, horses, clowns, old cars, cheerleaders, live music, Golden Retrievers with reindeer horns, and at least three wisemen.

From the airfield they will be wisked via parade to the Community Center where Santa will hear Christmas wishes from all the children of Carmel Valley.

Everyone is invited to join in the very special Fly-In Parade. If your club, group, organization, family, or just a bunch of friends wishes to get in on the parade, please contact Fly-In chairman Dave Lyon at 659-3036 for complete information, and watch the C.V. Sun for continuing updates.

'TIS THE SEASON

Yep, the thermometer outside my front door is saying it ... the extra blankets on our beds ... the free turkeys (with a hundred dollar purchase) at my supermarket ... it's that time again ... Christmas! ... when husbands are looking around for something special for the little woman. A fur coat, perhaps?

Of course he would never be so gross as to present you with a coat, no matter how gorgeous, made of the skins of animals taken in traps.

Oh no! You, a pillar of your local SPCA? ... only too aware of the horrors of animal trapping ... that the fifty mink skins in that coat can represent three thousand, six hundred hours of screaming, whimpering agony, ending with being beaten to death by the trapper.

You know about trapped animals chewing off their legs, and the babies left to starve in motherless nests.

You know that the wild fur trade has caused the decline of many species, and the extinction of some, that, for instance, there are no more than five hundred snow leopards left in their Himalyan home, that all cats, both bit and little, are now listed as "endangered", because of the demand for fur.

You may even know that in eastern Europe your pet dog or cat can be captured, and skinned, ending up as gloves or hats.

And, of course, you know that traps don't distinguish between wild and tame animals, that your beloved Fido can stagger home some day on three legs, the fourth a trailing bloody stump.

Ah, but suppose your good man assures you that the luscious contents of the beribboned box under the Christmas tree are not from trapped animals, but ranch raised, like mink or fox.

You gather it to you with squeals of joy. But wait.

Did you know, for instance, that mink and foxes live their entire lives in tiny wire-floored cages in which they can't even stand upright? That mink, semi-aquatic creatures, get no closer to water than to their drinking bowl? That these animals, waiting to be killed for their fur are so stressed that they often bite off their own tails, kill each other, and eat their own young?

Of course these millions of prisoners have to eat. The resourceful Russians, WSPA investigators found in 1994, were feeding the 20,000 Arctic foxes and 120,000 mink in a fur factory farm on the carcasses of seal pups. So much for saving the baby seals.

Killing is done in the cheapest possible way. Mink are dispatched with carbon monoxide or carbon dioxide. Foxes are commonly electrocuted ... electrodes connected to a battery are clamped in the mouth and inserted in the rectum of the animal. Selah! Another pelt!

And the 140 processes the fur has undergone involve such chemi-cals as sulfuric, formic, and lactic acids, formaldehyde, ammonia, chromium salts, alum, sodium chloride, copper sulfate, and fer-rous sulfate. And all these dangerous pollutants go into the environment? That's right. To say nothing of the groundwater pollution from inadequate disposal of urine and feces.

In recent years several countries, seeing fur farming as unethical, unsuitable for wild animals, as not meeting basic criteria for the welfare of farm animals are phasing out fur farming ... the Netherlands, the U.K., Norway, Denmark, Switzerland.

So, when someone wants to buy you a fur coat, any kind of fur, just say "No"!

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Another successful U.S. presidential election. Not a single U.S. political Sacred Cow was injured. About 1000 years from now Ross Perot, Dave Stockman and a couple other dissidents will be studied by historians to find out why nobody heard them, when they tried to warn the U.S. about impending bankruptcy, as the great American democracy approached 2000 A.D.

I am reminded of the famous 1902 eruption of Mt. Pelee, which killed 30,000 people in a city on the island of Martinique in the West Indies. The only survivor was in an underground jail cell. Scientists had been warning for several weeks that Pelee was about to blow, and that everybody should get out quickly. However, a city election was just a few days away, and the mayor wanted to keep everybody in town, for personal reasons. He assured the population that everything was o.k. It wasn't.

The side of the mountain suddenly blew out, like a blow torch, like the Mt. St. Helens eruption a few years ago in Washington. The city, right in the path of the blow torch, became an instant casualty, along with its people and some ships in the harbor. Granted, the wipeout of America by national bankruptcy will take longer than an instant, but it will happen, for basically the same reason, a refusal to heed warnings. Shipping our factories, (and our jobs), overseas, and at the same time digging us deeper into a now unpayable debt, now over $5 trillion, and having to borrow an extra $1 billion per day, just to meet the interest payments, is not responsible (or intelligent) leadership, but that's what we have, no matter how it's sliced.

And, as long as the two major parties, taking turns refusing to either listen to reason or allow intelligent policy changes to be made, (like the mayor of the doomed city), continue leading us in a straight line toward Third World Nation status, there is little that we dissidents can do, except maybe just join them, and "live it up", and occasionally try to discourage our White House and Congress from getting us into new overseas wars and money give-away projects.

condone his nephew's climbing onto someone else's general aviation aircraft when the 10 year pilot admittedly knew it was inappropriate?

How can a 10 year pilot take offense at Lars de Jounge for exercising his duty as airport operator in attempting to protect any unoccupied aircraft on his field?

How can a 10 year pilot complain about the $10 landing/overnight fee at Carmel Valley Vintage Airfield if he can afford the not inexpensive privilege/pleasure of flying or owning an airplane? Be assured Santa will have the landing fee waived as was done last year to welcome his arrival.

The airport is private property, as I'm sure the 10 year pilot realizes, and Mr. de Jounge is continuing the tradition of good will by permitting the general public to enjoy the privilege of access to the property under the condition of certain sensible rules he has posted around the area.

Scott Daniel's letter reflects a rather petty personality which should not be considered as any part of the airport's attitude toward the local residents and airport users.

The commonly accepted practice within the aviation community is: "Look But Don't Touch."

Community Supports Robin as CV Librarian

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

It's no wonder that the county is always being sued, and losing, over personnel matters. The latest, in a long line of management errors, pertains to our own Carmel Valley Library.

For the last year, our residents have enjoyed the capable services of Robin at the Carmel Valley library. Robin was hired as a temporary librarian. Recently, the county decided to make the position permanent. Although Robin was one of the top three candidates for the job, the position was given to a San Francisco applicant because "she interviewed better". Does this factor actually predict better job performance?

Loyalty, hard work, and community support count for naught when the county makes hiring decisions. Carmel Valley has a history of providing support, including financial support, for the county libraries. It is unfortunate that the county has so little regard for the wishes of the community it is supposed to serve.

If you feel as I do that this county hiring decision was manifestly unfair, please call Bob at 424-3244 to voice your support for Robin.

One further irony - the new hire won't actually be working at the Carmel Valley library for awhile. She has to be trained to do Robin's job.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 33 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

Recently I mentioned that new modems with speeds of 56 kbps should appear in the next few months. There have been several press releases along those lines in the past few weeks and, sure enough, Madison Avenue has done it again. Today the hype is in the headlines, tomorrow or later, the news is in the footnotes. The hype was that it is a 56 kbps modem. The footnotes were that it receives at that speed and sends at 33.6 kbps. Thus, for almost all applications, it is a 33.6 kbps modem. About a year ago, AT&T announced a product which, if I remember correctly, was called Globespan, and which was supposed to turn an ordinary telephone line into the equivalent of a T1 line. When the dust died down, the footnotes had it that the range was a mere 5 miles - some globe. (Note: A T1 line can carry about 24 simultaneous voice conversations, or about 1.5 megabits/second, or about 50 modems transmitting at a speed 28.8 kbps.)

The best news I have heard recently about modems is that Intel is now absorbing the hardware part of the modem into their CPU chip - it's called the MMX Pentium chip. When these chips become widely available, they will relegate the hundred or so modem manufacturers to software developers and I think few people will cry over the disappearance of all those infuriating and barely compatible modems. Unfortunately, for a year or two at least, we can expect many teething problems with the software modems.

ISDN, or Integrated Services Data Networks, have all-digital transmissions and is becoming quite popular. All that is required at the customer's end are the usual telephone wires and a digital modem or digital phone. In fact, several devices may be attached to an ISDN line and, for example, three simultaneous telephone calls can be transmitted on the same line. When using a single digital modem, the speed of transmission can be up to about five times the speed of an ordinary analog line at its best. Yet, in most parts of the country, an ISDN line costs about double that of an ordinary analog one. One of the greatest advantages of ISDN is its ability to transmit video and voice simultaneously, thus allowing teleconferencing. About two years ago, a "video" phone was released for use on analog telephone phone lines by AT&T (again), accompanied by substantial hype. It was able to transmit a few monochrome pictures of about 3 inches square every minute. True video requires about 30 frames per second.

The ability to teleconference makes working at home a very practical proposition and can save considerable wear and tear on humans as well as the environment when it is done as an alternative to travelling. It also has profound implications for distance learning; the global classroom is approaching.

As was discussed several times earlier, analog modems actually convert very precise digital signals into noise for transmission on the ordinary (analog) phone lines. This process makes the transmission more error prone and all that is avoided in ISDN in which the digital signals are transmitted in a very quiet environment. In fact a conversation between two persons each with a digital phone and on ISDN line is almost always crystal clear. It was mentioned earlier that ISDN is not available in all parts of the country but is in our area. Pacific Bell has a useful booklet called ISDN: A Users Guide to Services, Applications and Resources in California which is a good introduction to ISDN. Pac Bell also has info lines at 800-622-0735 and 800 4pb isdn. A good independent source of information on ISDN is at Lawrence Livermore Labs: Voice 510-423-7757, fax 510-423-0186, or e-mail Kluz1@llnl.gov.

In the next part we will look at viri and related little beasties.

Understanding Required Reporting to the I.R.S.

Answers For Sellers of Real Property

Sellers of real property will have certain information regarding the sale reported to the Internal Revenue Service. This required reporting is a consequence of the Tax Reform Act of 1986; it is intended to encourage taxpayer compliance and aid in audit and enforcement efforts by the I.R.S.

To help you better understand this subject, the California Land Title Association has answered some of the questions most commonly asked about Required Reporting to the I.R.S.

Q. Who is required to report to the I.R.S.?

A. Sellers of real property, under guidelines established by the I.R.S., are required to have their gross proceeds from the sale reported on a Form 1099S. When a settlement agent is used, the I.R.S. makes this agent responsible for delivery of the information on the Form 1099S.

The settlement agent generally will be the escrow agent or title company; however, it may be an attorney, real estate broker or other person providing settlement services.

Q. What is an I.R.S. Form 1099S, and what will be reported?

A. The Form 1099S is the reporting form adopted by the I.R.S. for submitting the information required by law.

The information will be transferred onto magnetic media by the settlement agent who will store the information and make the required report to the I.R.S. The settlement agent is also responsible for keeping a master copy of all transactions reported.

In general, information required by the I.R.S. falls into the following categories:

(1) The name, address and taxpayer ID number (social security or tax identification number) of the seller(s)

(2) A general description of the property (in most cases an address)

(3) The closing date of the transaction

(4) The gross proceeds of the transaction (even though gross proceeds do not correspond to taxable income)

(5) Any property involved as part of the transaction other than cash or cash equivalent

(6) The name, address and taxpayer identification number of the settlement agent.

Q. On what type of transaction is a Form 1099S required?

A. Currently, typical homeowner transactions covered include sales and exchanges of 1-4 family residential properties such as houses, townhouses, and condominiums. Also reportable is stock in cooperative housing corporations and mobile homes without wheels.

Specifically excluded from reporting are foreclosures and abandonments of real property and financing or refinancing of properties.

Q. What happens if the seller(s) refuses to provide the taxpayer identification number for the Form 1099S?

A. Should the seller fail to provide the identification number and certify its correctness, the settlement agent may choose to:

(1) Delay the closing of the transactions until the information is furnished, or

(2) Complete the transaction and report to the I.R.S. that an attempt was made to obtain the information from the seller.

Q. How is the sale reported when there is more than one seller involved or when multiple sellers do not own equal interests in the property?

A. Multiple sellers may allocate the gross proceeds among themselves for purposes of reporting. If there is no allocation, an incomplete allocation or conflicting allocations, then the entire gross proceeds will be reported for each seller.

Q. Where can I go for further information on taxation of real property?

A. The I.R.S. provides free publications that explain the tax aspects of real estate transactions. You may wish to order: Publication #523 "Tax Information on Selling Your Home"; #544 "Sales and Other Dispositions of Assets; #530 "Tax Information for Owners of Homes, Condominiums, and Cooperative Apartments"; #551 "Basis of Assets".

WATER SOLUTIONS:
Where Do We Go From Here?

1 In public forums this summer, we asked Monterey Peninsula residents how we should solve the community's water problems. At our request, National Demographics interviewed 16,000 Peninsula residents by phone. Here's what we found out:

- Residents do not want development and growth
- Residents want a secure water supply
- Residents want to avoid drought water restrictions and conditions

2 The State has ordered the replacement of 10,730 acre-feet of water a year from the Carmel River aquifer. That represents two-thirds of the annual water usage by Peninsula residents. Based on the State's order, and the opinions and desires of Monterey Peninsula residents, California-American Water Company (Cal-Am) is initiating a program to assure:

- Restoration of the Carmel River—the fish, the riverbanks, and the habitat in general
- Further promotion of water conservation through continued education
- A new pricing system, effective January 1997, to reward those who use less water

3 A vital centerpiece of this program is a No-Growth Dam to provide water to meet existing water needs only. The No-Growth Dam will replace the 10,730 acre-feet of water, revive the Carmel River, restore the riparian habitat and provide security against drought. Cal-Am will support the community in enforcing a No-Growth dam and will require, as a condition of its application to the California Public Utilities Commission, the State Water Resources Control Board and the Army Corps of Engineers, that the Dam will not be used for new growth. The Dam will be:

- Privately financed and constructed by Cal-Am
- Capable of holding 24,000 acre-feet of water
- Located approximately 2,400 feet down stream of the existing Los Padres Dam
- A 282-foot high roller compacted concrete dam measuring about 1,600 feet along its crest
